

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A putter head includes a body and a light insert. The body includes a face portion, two mass portions, and a connecting portion. The face portion is located on a front side of the body, the mass portions are located on two sides
5 of the body, and the connecting portion is formed between the mass portions for connecting the mass portions, with a compartment being defined between the mass portion and the connecting portion. The light insert is securely mounted in the compartment of the body. The light insert includes at least one aiming mark on a top face thereof. Further, the club head has a center of 10 gravity positioned within the light insert.